

ABSTRACT

The disclosure describes a method of use of the radioisotope Xenon-133 for the treatment of AIDS, other viral and non-viral infections. The treatment entails the inhalation of a gas mixture containing the radioactive, beta-particle emitting Xe-133 gas for providing superior targeting and destruction of the AIDS vectors in the blood, lymph and body water when compared against external beam X-ray therapy.